

Press release Barracuda Racing Wheels Europe:
Large Ultralight Project 2.0 on the individual muscle car Ford Mustang GT

Tuning and customization have a long tradition in the USA. After all, the vehicle modification had its origin there as early as the 1920s in the form of hot rodding. So it is hardly surprising that to this day there is not only a large community in the United States that tunes their mostly domestic vehicles spectacularly, but that US car drivers around the world have a particularly great affinity for refining their sweethearts. This is what happened with the Ford Mustang GT of the current LAE series shown here, which was equipped with a set of high-quality Barracuda Racing Wheels, among other things.

The company cardiologie Tuning, which acts as a Barracuda base in Bergisch Gladbach near Cologne, installed the Project 2.0 rims from the Ultralight Series on the axles of the V8 muscle car, which are particularly light thanks to the flow forming process. They are used at the front in 9x21 with a concave star and at the back in 10.5x21 inches with extremely concave styling and the black brushed finish: This was recently introduced and is only available for these 21-inch dimensions. The tires measure 255/30ZR21 and 285/30ZR21. The appropriate lowering was done with the help of a KW Variant 1 coilover kit.

In addition, cardiologie implemented some further refinements. At the rear there is a diffuser and a spoiler from ABBES Design as well as a cleaved cover between the taillights on the trunk lid. In addition, the coupé was given a matt gray film with black racing stripes and all parts that were not painted ex works are now finished in glossy black.
